

The Massive Crocodile

In an abandoned lab in deep Sacramento there is a giant test tube with something floating in it. The rest of the lab is trashed and it seems like everyone left it in a hurry. Somebody walks into the laboratory and slams a sledgehammer into the test tube. A crack appears on it and the liquid inside starts spilling out. The whole test tube then shatters and the thing inside falls out. It gets up and starts to run in a single direction.

You are walking home from school through a shortcut on a path in a small forest you know. In the distance you see a bunch of trees falling over and it's coming in your direction so you run away. You're running through a farm on the edge of town, and you run into one of the wheat fields. You still hear the stomping behind you and you start to get tired. The footsteps are gaining on you and you make a decision to either fight whatever it is, or run. If you run, you could run into either the city or the deep forest.